Background

The existence of people in Old Crow has been traced back 30,000 years, and according to archaeological evidence it may be the earliest civilization in north America.

The people in the Old Crow area originally settled at Fort Yukon at the mouth of the Porcupine River in 1840, because of the trading posts on the river. When the Canada/ U.S. border was established in 1867, the Vuntut Gwitchin moved to Rampart House, a trading post just inside the border.

The present location of Old Crow, further north from that site, was chosen because of its unique hunting and fishing location, near major spring caribou crossing places – also it had been a gathering spot for families going down the Porcupine River to trade. Until the 1950s people wintered in smamll camps along the river, however, after the building of a store and a public school at Old Crow the present community became a year-round settlement.

The community is about 800 km north of Whitehorse, inside the Arctic Circle. It is accessible only by air, or boat in summer from Fort Yukon, Alaska and Eagle Plains via the Eagle and Bell River. Statistics from June 1997 show a population of 305 in Old Crow.

First Nation Land Acreage and Status

Reserve Land: None.
Land Set Aside: None. Settled and transferred with Land Claims.
Parcels of Land Set Aside: None. Settled and transferred with Land Claims.

Land Claims and Self Government

This First Nation was the first to complete negotiations for First Nation Final and Self-Government Agreements in May of 1992.

Health Care

Old Crow has a community health centre, which is staffed by two community nurses and is open weekdays. A doctor is available the first week of each month. Emergency services are available at any time.

Social Services

YTG Health and Social Services has a social worker providing services in the community. The Vuntut Gwitchin First Nation Social Programs Department provides community social development services, including in-home adult care, supportive counseling and referral, and native courtworker services.

Other Services

VGFN and YTG maintain the local roads, water and sewer, and fire protection.

The reported crime rate is equal to the number of reported Criminal Code and drug incidents per 100 residents. It is calculated as follows: the total number of Criminal Code and drug incidents reported in each RCMP detachment area in a given year is divided by the June population of the respective RCMP detachment area, and the result is multiplied by 100.
